

Art - 27.4.20

Portraits

Making a Sketch Book - optional

I found this link the other day about making your own sketchbook which looks fairly simple:

<https://www.accessart.org.uk/making-sketchbooks-an-introduction/>

If you are able to, this would be an excellent way to keep your portrait work together.

Face Drawing Practise

Think about what you liked from last week's research. Did you like certain colours, ways of representing faces or certain kinds of marks on the page for example? If there was something, bare this in mind when you are drawing today.

Today, make a series of drawings of different people in your household in sketchbook. Get people to sit for you, draw them when they're doing something else, use photographs, draw from memory or imagination. There is no wrong way to do this. These are not supposed to be completed portraits, they are for practise. Fill a page or two; don't worry if you go wrong.

The idea is to create something similar to the examples shown using your own style. Use pencil, biro or pencil crayons – whatever materials you have at home.

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=cdSzAOgSuew>

<https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=yyfPULeQhPo>

You could look at the links above and the diagrams below for some ideas and things to think about when drawing.

Remember, there is no wrong way to do this. Don't rush; spend a day or two doing this, on and off, when you're inspired.

Proportions of the Face

How to Draw a Face

Use these instructions to help you draw a simple cartoon face.

